Course Description

This course explores the history of the Holocaust in the context of the Second World War (1939-1945) with a central focus on examples of resistance to discrimination, fascism and oppression. We will explore varied forms of opposition including armed resistance, spiritual resistance, resistance through writing and identity preservation. We will read autobiographies, view documentary and dramatic films, and use museum resources to develop our understanding of resistance. Required activities include a visit to the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center (Skokie, IL). We will also consider the implications of this history for making ethical choices in our world today.

SCPS Student Learning Outcomes

After completing this course, you will be able to:

- Describe in writing historical context and timeline of relevant events
- Develop historical skills by examining historical evidence provided in class, assess the online materials and through museum exhibits
- Discuss various forms of resistance that occurred during the Holocaust
- Discuss the historical research related to rescue and resistance as it relates to the Holocaust.
- Develop historical thinking as they evaluate different point of view and write critical analyses of primary sources that provide first hand testimony on past events.

If in a SCPS competence program, (BAIFA, BAC, BAGB, BAECE), this course addresses the following requirements:

Competence	Competence Statement / Criteria
H5	Can analyze issues and problems from a global perspective
A1X	Can interpret the work of writers within a historical context
A3X	Can examine persecution during World War II from an ethical perspective
H2X	Can use public or private institutions as resources for understanding a historical issue

Learning Outcomes for SNC 205 Liberal Studies Program/ Historical Inquiry Domain

- Historical understanding is a critical competence for our society and a fundamental component of a liberal arts education at DePaul University. Students who are competent in understanding the past are able to achieve learning outcomes that demonstrate their successful development and application of historical knowledge, historical skills, and historical thinking.
- Students have demonstrated a depth and breadth of historical knowledge of specified content when they are able to: explain historical developments in terms of continuity and change; describe the relevant political, economic, social or cultural contexts of historical events and developments; explain how people have lived, acted and thought in one or more particular historical periods.
- Students have demonstrated historical skills when they are able to: analyze and evaluate primary and secondary sources; differentiate between historical facts and historical interpretations; articulate an historical argument; support an interpretation with evidence from primary and secondary sources.
- Students have demonstrated historical thinking when they are able to: articulate how geography and regional differences affect the past; interpret the complexity and diversity among issues, events, and ideas of the past; distinguish among multiple perspectives that shape interpretations of the past; use the categories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, region, and religion to analyze historical events and developments.
- Students will have demonstrated their abilities in understanding the past to communicate in writing when they compose written work that expresses historical knowledge, historical skills, and historical thinking.

Learning Strategies and Resources

Some learning activities, assignments and deadlines will vary depending on the delivery format of the course and may differ slightly from what is presented in this document.

In this course: students will develop a depth and breadth of historical knowledge about the historical context of the Holocaust including important people, places, events, and ideas during 1933-1945 in Europe. Course activities include listening to lectures, reading history textbooks, assessing online materials from the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum and participating in a guided tour of the Illinois Holocaust Museum & Education Center. Our analysis, evaluation, and synthesis of primary and secondary source materials will focus on questions on the nature of resistance and rescue by those who opposed the war, genocide, and persecution.
